More Than Blue Crab: An Exportable Model of Excellence, Quality, and Expertise

From Tunisian seas to the world, the Tunisian blue crab represents far more than a seafood product. It reflects a collective commitment where all stakeholders—fishermen, processing plants, and industry actors—work together to ensure consistent quality and excellence. Built on a shared dedication to high standards across the entire value chain, Tunisia offers not only a premium product, but also an exportable model of expertise, reliability, and international quality compliance

From selective traps to premium crab: quality with responsibility.

Fishermen and processing units work closely together to ensure the production of high-quality blue crab while respecting the principles of sustainable fishing. At sea, fishermen use selective traps that target legal-sized crabs and reduce bycatch, helping to preserve marine resources and support natural stock regeneration. On land, processors apply strict standards of hygiene, traceability, and quality control to maintain the freshness and value of the product. This shared commitment across the value chain ensures both product excellence and the long-term sustainability of the fishery.
